Scope and Contents of the Materials

Please note that intellectual content in some series may defer from the date span in which the materials were actually gathered and maintained by Archbishop Hallinan.

The collection consists of personal papers of Archbishop Paul J. Hallinan. (See Acquisition Information within this finding aid for more information on the collection.) Types of materials present include correspondence, essays, research notes, papers, reports, newspaper and magazine clippings, articles, booklets, news releases, encyclical letter publications, general publications, pamphlets, manuscripts, typescripts, and copies of scholarly resources. The majority of the collection revolves around Hallinan's research and scholarly interests, including his research in preparation for his doctoral dissertation for Western Reserve University.

Biographical Note

Most Reverend Paul J. Hallinan

First Archbishop of Atlanta (1962 - 1968)

Born: April 8, 1911

Ordained priest: February 20, 1937

Ordained bishop: October 28, 1958

Installed as Archbishop of Atlanta: March 29, 1962

Died: March 27, 1968

On February 21, 1962 the Diocese of Atlanta was elevated to the status of Archdiocese. Paul J. Hallinan, Bishop of Charleston, South Carolina was named the first Archbishop of Atlanta.

Born in Painesville, Ohio, April 8, 1911, he was ordained to the priesthood in Cleveland in 1937 and served as an army chaplain in the South Pacific during World War II. He was installed as Archbishop of Atlanta on March 29, 1962. In that same year he received an honorary LLD from Notre Dame University. Archbishop Hallinan is best remembered for his personal dedication to the cause of social justice and his involvement in the civil rights activity of the 1960s. He was also deeply involved in the renewal of the Catholic Church, especially in the area of worship, during and following the Second Vatican Council. On March 27, 1968 Archbishop Hallinan died after a long battle with hepatitis.

During the last two years of his life, Archbishop Hallinan was assisted by Auxiliary Bishop Joseph L. Bernardin, who went on to become Archbishop of Cincinnati and then Chicago, eventually becoming Cardinal while at the Archdiocese of Chicago.

The impalement of the personal Arms of Archbishop Hallinan with those of the Archdiocese of Atlanta, along with its description, was done by William F. J. Ryan, New York, NY, and West Chatham, MA. The Arms of the Archdiocese of Atlanta were devised by Ryan in 1956. The following is William F. J. Ryan's description of Archbishop Hallinan's Coat of Arms:

The entire "achievement," or coat of arms as it is generally called, is composed of the shield with its charges, the motto and the external ornaments. As one looks at the shield, the terms dexter (right) and sinister (left) must be understood contrariwise, as the shield was worn on the arm in medieval days and these terms were used in the relationship of the one bearing the shield.

The dexter impalement is given in ecclesiastical heraldry to the arms of jurisdiction; in this instance, the arms of the Archdiocese of Atlanta.

Atlanta, known as the "Crossroads of the South" because of converging railroads which gave the city its early prominence, received its name as the eastern terminus of the Western and Atlantic Railroad which connected north Georgia with the Tennessee River. Originally called Whitehall, then Terminus, and afterwards in 1843 Marthasville, the state legislature finally acquiesced to the wishes of the railroad and accepted the name of Atlanta in 1847, thus naming the city indirectly after the Atlantic Ocean.

The Atlantic Ocean is represented on the shield of the Archdiocese by white and blue wavy bars, the heraldic equivalent of the waves of the sea; seven bars in number to symbolize the Seven Sacraments.

The crown of Christ the King denotes the title of the cathedral church, the Eternal King whose redeeming Sacrifice on the Cross is renewed daily in the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. Above the crown is placed the Cherokee rose, the State flower of Georgia (Rosa Laevigata.) as befits an archdiocese located in the Capital City. The Cherokee rose is a white flower with a yellow center.

The crown of Christ the King, in the arms of the Archdiocese of Atlanta, also has the secondary representation of the crown of King George II of England after whom Georgia was named. The blue and white wavy bands may be said as well to symbolize the rolling foothills of the Blue Ridge country; but, more important, these are the colors of our Blessed Mother.

The sinister impalement, on the right of the viewer, bears the personal arms of Archbishop Hallinan.

The arms of the Irish Hallinan family consist of a silver field emblazoned with a green oak tree, its roots exposed, and bearing a golden crown in the middle of the foliage. These arms have been "differenced" by the addition of a golden sword to honor Saint Paul, the baptismal patron of the archbishop, and by two red hearts, from the coat of arms of the revered Cardinal Newman, to honor the titular of the Newman Foundation of Western Reserve University, where the archbishop served as chaplain at the time of his elevation to the episcopacy.

The tree of the Hallinan arms has more than a passing interest inasmuch as the grandfather and father of the archbishop were both nurserymen.

O'Hallinan is derived from the Gaelic "Hailgheanain," variously spelled O'Hallinaine, O'Hallinan, Hallinan, Hallanan and Halnan, who are descendants of "Ailgheanan," the diminutive of "Ailghean," meaning "noble offspring." It is an old Munster surname found chiefly in Cork and Limerick counties.

The motto, "Ut Diligatis Invicem" is translated "That you love one another." The full text of this verse from the Gospel of Saint John reads: "This is my commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you" (15:12), a part of the discourse of Our Lord to the apostles at the Last Supper.

Behind the arms is placed a gold archiepiscopal cross with double traverse, the mitre and the crosier. Surrounding the shield or "achievement" is a pontifical hat with ten tassels on each side in four rows, all in green.

Prior to 1870, the pontifical hat was worn in solemn conclaves held in conjunction with papal functions. The color of the pontifical hat and the number and color of the tassels were signs of the rank of a prelate, a custom which is still preserved in ecclesiastical heraldry.

Administrative Information

Alternate Extent Statement: 14 Standard Legal-Size Document Cases; 2 Standard Letter-Size Document Cases; 4 Index Card Boxes; 1 Oversized Box (1 item); 1 Oversized Folder (3 items.)

Access Restrictions: Access to materials depends upon the physical condition of the item(s), privacy and confidentiality considerations, legal factors, requirements set forth by the donor(s), and the status (staff, parishioner, or public) of the individual requesting information. Per the archivist's discretion, certain series, folders, and/or items may be restricted and may require approval from the Chancellor to access. Contact the Office of Archives & Records for more information.

Use Restrictions: The contents of these materials may be subject to copyright. Obtainment of permission to copy or publish from the materials depends upon the physical condition of the item(s), privacy and confidentiality considerations, legal factors, requirements set forth by the donor(s), and the status (staff, parishioner, or public) of the individual requesting information.

Physical Access Note: Caution is required due to the brittleness of some of the materials. Oversized items in the collection are restricted from general viewing due to fragility.

Technical Access Note: Microfilm requires a microfilm reader for viewing.

Acquisition Source: John (Jac) Treanor of the Archives and Records of the Archdiocese of Chicago.

Acquisition Method: The collection of materials was transferred from the Archdiocese of Chicago to the Archdiocese of Atlanta. Prior to the transfer, the materials had been in the possession of the late Cardinal Joseph Bernardin in Chicago. When Cardinal Bernardin died in 1996, the Archbishop Hallinan materials were transferred to Chicago's Archdiocesan Archives. The items were then transferred to the Archdiocese of Atlanta in April of 2001 when Jac Treanor, Vice Chancellor for Archives and Records in the Archdiocese of Chicago, sent the materials to the Archdiocese of Atlanta. For more information please see <http://www.georgiabulletin.org/local/2001/04/19/b/>.

Appraisal Information: A large portion of the collection, particularly "Series 2: Subject Files," consists of clippings from newspapers and various journals. Much of the series was retained and all subject files kept by Hallinan that had materials within them are still well-represented in the collection. However, many articles from popular and well-documented publications were weeded due to a lack of storage space. Examples of items weeded included articles from Time Magazine, America, Jubilee, Commonweal, and other contemporary journals.

Separated Materials: A roll of microfilm, originally found in "Series 5: Research Materials," was separated on 2009 January 27 and has been placed in the Microfilm Collection. The microfilm is "America Centrale" Volume 22 and was originally sent to Archbishop Hallinan in an envelope from Rome, Italy.

Original/Copies Note: A great deal of the collection, particularly Series 5, consists of copies of originals. Nothing definitive can be stated about the location of the originals. Duplicates (originals) of the following booklets were sent in December of 2008 to the Diocese of Cleveland: "Diocese of Cleveland. Conspectus of the Subject-Matter of Examination for Diplomas of Competence to Teach in Parochial Schools" (1888) and "Constitution and By-Laws for the Government of the Parochial Schools of the Diocese of Cleveland" (1887). For more information please see the following Web site: http://dioceseofcleveland.org/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=108&Itemid=247.
